Open Letter to Chief Justice Shepard Details Court Abuses

Indiana Chief Judge Randall Terry Shepard has been informed today through an open letter of the violations of law by Indiana judges at all levels, including the Supreme Court. The letter, signed by a group of mothers and fathers from various parts of the state involved in court actions including divorce, criminal, paternity, custody, and more, includes complaints of serious deprivations of liberty, and fundamental rights including the right to: counsel, a fair trial, non-discriminatory treatment on the basis of race and gender, and due process and equal protection, and parental rights.

In addition to the contrived charges that most of these parents have faced (some in retaliation for their speaking out), what is most disturbing is the pattern of intentional harm to children for profit.

It is a travesty against children and humanity to use them as pawns in a scheme including the courts, county prosecutors, Child Protection Services and the state profiting monetarily from federal incentives by separating children from their fit, supportive and loving parents through unwarranted and often unlawful CPS and court actions by putting them in Foster Care or for adoption, drugging them against their parents' will, or, most prolifically, separating a fit parent from the biological child(ren) so that the said institutions profit from contrived federal "Child Support" enforcement incentive paid to the state, which qualifies for the incentives only when parental "child support" is processed through the courts. Hence, the conflicting roles of the courts benefiting from the scheme.
